

LEARNING STYLES

I would consider myself a visual/tactical learner. I do believe learning styles play a role in one's education. Not just as a personal preference, but a mental balance. Each person is different, and their learning abilities are different, as well. Rather than challenging their preference, I believe it's best to accommodate their abilities. I have always had a hands-on mentality, and though I learn well other ways, nothing quite sticks like seeing an action performed.